

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhoea, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. feb. 21-awf-lyr

HISTORY OF THE CLASS OF '85.

[VALEDICTORY, BY MISS CARRIE MEILY, OF THE CLASS OF '85, BISHOP WHITAKER'S "SCHOOL FOR GIRLS," June 25, 1885.]

The history of the Class of '85 antedates all authentic accounts of the two preceding classes, inasmuch as one of its members has been a constant attendant at this institution for the cultivation of progressive knowledge for over five years.

It is well known that in the remoteness of the past the greater part of the older girls of the school aspired to initiation into the mysteries of this class of classes; but the inferior applicants were doomed to disappointment. Of all those would-be graduates of the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-five there were successful only the five eminently superior young women whom you behold in this illustrious Senior class. It must be admitted that on parting with the graduates of '84 there was much of the sunshine of smiles mingled with our tears, for did not their exit leave us in the full possession of the Senior dignity. As one of our number remarked, we would not linger to inspect the quality, size or antiquity of their shoes; but step into them immediately.

Strangely enough, the infant of our class was the first to enter upon a course of study, and made her appearance at the school on the 16th of October, 1879.

Another was added to the class on the 29th of January, 1882. At the beginning of the next school year—August 24, 1882—two more shining lights were admitted; and, later in the term, burst into view the most brilliant star in the constellation.

Unlike our sister cluster in the sky we mourn instead of one, two "lost Pleiades," for one of our number left us to enter society as an "Oakland belle," and the other to mingle in the social enjoyments of Reno.

There is one thing to be regretted in regard to our class, namely, that there were not at least two boarders among the successful candidates, as it would have been much easier to maintain its dignity and importance in the eyes of the pupils residing within the walls of the institution. However, the self-evident superiority of our day members partly compensates for this deficiency.

At the beginning of the Advent Term of 1884 we were given the extreme felicity of occupying the chairs and tables which had been the property, so to speak, of our predecessors of that year, and certain hieroglyphics found in the drawers of said tables are lasting monuments to their skill in wielding the pen.

One of our number preferred to remain until the end of the term in her old seat among the Juniors, owing to her attachment to one of that body. It would be almost impossible to picture the rapture and elation of the first days of our occupancy. Then we fully realized the height of our attainments. From this elevation beholding the trials and tribulations of the struggling Juniors, and, sympathizing with their misery, we could lend them our superior aid and wisdom, even though the penalty for borrowing is the confiscation of the loan by certain members of the faculty.

After answering as far as lay within the bounds of human possibility such questions as the following, "What are the plots and characters of all Scott's works?" "Was Catharine of Arragon beautiful?" "How would you begin an essay in favor of slang?" we were rewarded, when the Juniors were reproved for being noisy in the school room, by the exclamation, "Oh, the Seniors made all the noise!"—ingratitude so base as to wring from us the despairing cry, "How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to help a thankless girl!"

During the Presidential campaign, we took a deep interest in politics, our corner often being the scene of violent, though not intelligent, discussion, especially on the part of the Democrats, for be it known, this class is staunch Republican throughout. But, when we heard the result of the November election, we immediately tabooed all talk of politics. Otherwise we pursued the even tenor of our way, with no cloud to mar the bright firmament of our hopes and aspirations, until began our study of the profound subjects of Evidence of Christianity and Psychology, of which we quite soon had our "Mental Fill." With thoughts among the stars, but feet upon the earth, we traced the outlines of the forms that nightly people the heavens, and entered into discussions upon subjects that occupy the minds of all great astronomers like ourselves.

Our class officers were not chosen until the beginning of the year 1885, when we elected our President, our Vice President, our Baneroff, Secretary, and Byron. In our class occurs what has never before occurred in the annals of the school,—every member is an officer in the full sense of the word, not a mere figure head, whose title has been created only that may be said "Each member holds an office." After the class elections, the next thing of importance was the selection of a motto, which should not only serve as a precept in school and after life, but would also be sufficiently high-sounding to produce a feeling of overwhelming awe in the minds of the Juniors. "Semper Fidelis" was suggested by the Salutatorian, but, as our President remarked, although we were always faithful in wishing a good mark; always faithful at lunch time; always faithful in forgetting to study our elocution lesson, were we, or would we ever be, always faithful to each other and our duties? "Anxillum ab Alto," (Help from on High), answered all requirements except that our worthy President, whose knowledge of Latin is not extensive, objected on the ground that it was too difficult to pronounce. Upon the Vice President's offering to give her a course of lessons in pronunciation, this precept was unanimously adopted.

For our flower, we chose the white clover blossom, and as a natural consequence settled upon the four-leaved clover as the design of our pin. In order to give the jeweler an idea of what we desired, it was necessary that a sketch should be shown him. Our honorary member, with the aid of our artist, made a number of drawings of the "lucky leaf," which we conveyed with extreme care to that respected gentleman. How true to nature those sketches were, may be inferred by simply beholding the results of this exercise of genius.

After we assembled at the close of the Spring holidays, we no longer indulged in those prolonged "Moral Sighs," which the bright Easter sun had converted into smiles. Senior Elocution then demanded our attention; and wonderful were the feats of oratory performed in the gymnasium for the delectation of waiting music pupils and any stray passer through that oft frequented apartment. It may be here remarked that the gymnasium was selected as being the only place, except the open air, suited to the exercise of our vigorous lungs.

When such fragments as "The sword of Washington!" "The staff of Franklin!" "John Maynard!" "Ay, ay, sir!" "Speak the speech I pray you as I pronounce it to you!" "Sir, the atrocious crime of being a young man I shall neither attempt to palliate nor deny!" etc., floated in upon the ears of those pursuing their studies in the school room above, they must have been filled with awe and admiration, not unmixed, perhaps, with a desire to smile audibly.

On the morning of the 9th of June, 1885, a very beautifully-worded invitation came through the mail to one of the Seniors, desiring her presence at a class drive and luncheon on the 25th of June of the same year. Little did the writer of that note imagine the anger which should be aroused against the one to whom it was addressed, when, being asked if she had previously received any information on the subject, she indiscreetly told the truth. But Juno's wrath was finally appeased and peace once more reigned on Olympus. But for all the disturbance occasioned by the imprudent Senior, the invitation was very gratifying, and, as a class, we fully appreciate the kindness of the Juniors.

It has long been an object of Junior ambition to discover the name of our class society. To-day I will satisfy this desire for information by revealing the significance of the mystic letters, B. F. C. Know, then, ye aspiring Juniors, we exist under the title of the "Bona Fortuna" Club.

On the thirteenth of June, 1885, the honorary member of our club and the C. C. C., a society composed of the graduates expectant of '86, invited the members of both clubs to a reception in the studio, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. It was the well-known purpose of our hostess to bring about a reconciliation between the two societies, and it was tacitly understood by the members of both that, at this gathering all ill feeling which might have existed on either side was to be banished forever. The hopes of our "Mutual Friend" were fully realized; and, from that day to this, all has "gone merry as a marriage bell." In proof of our good will, at parting we gave vent to our feelings in the following: "Our dear Alma Mater forever, Three cheers for 'B. F.' and 'C. C.'"

On this 24th of June, ends our history as the class of '85. If, in our records, there is anything to our disparagement, we ask you to be lenient in your judgment; and to let our better qualities stand out from the duller background of mediocrity.

We have endeavored, with all our strength, to maintain a true historian's neutrality,—never hesitating to 'bring forward our own faults, or trying to palliate them by making more prominent the sins of others. In reply to the accusation which proceeded from the Junior ranks, that we would deal unfairly with them in our history, "or words to that effect," I simply reply; this is the history of the class of '85; and let no one entertain the idea that we concern ourselves with the records of Junior proceedings.

Now the tale of the past is ended; let us look into the future and see what it will bring us as life's portion.

Prophecy of the Class of '85.

'Tis a glorious summer evening, not a cloud is in the sky,
Thoughts are coming, ling'ring, passing, as the hours unheeded fly,
Hark, I hear the sound of voices, coming to me on the breeze,
In the distance there are figures, growing clearer 'neath the breeze.

"What is this?" I utter quickly—'Tis the Shadow Land, my child,
Starting up, I see an old man, calm of countenance and mild,
King of this strange Land of Shadows, standing closely at my side,
Saying, as I pause bewildered, gazing on eyes wonder-wide:

"Stand, and there will pass before you, scenes and actions yet to be,
Changes in the lives of schoolmates, now so careless, gay and free."

EMILY C. CUTTING.
As I look, the scene is altered, where were trees, a cottage white
Rears its head; and from it comes a maiden, gay and bright.
Maiden? No, a "godly matron," for a childish voice I hear,
Calling from within the cottage in the tones of childhood clear.

Now the face is turning toward me—Emily, 'tis thine I see,
Taking in thine arms thy loved one, who so fondly clings to thee,
And the King, in accents gentle, "What a mother she will be,
All her life shall be a bright one, sugar now the sisters three.

Loving, caring for her dear ones, leading them in God's own way,
Till she fall into the slumber that will end at Judgment day."

Ere those words have passed the King's lips come two other children fair,
Graceful limbs and fairy fingers, violet eyes and golden hair.

Sitting at her feet they listen, while, the youngest at her side,
Much she tells of lives of great men who have lived and served and died,
Thus, her work by love made easy, happily the days go by,
Days of joy, unmixed with sorrow, full of love that ne'er will die.

CORA B. MANNING.
Lo, the bright cottage, it fades from my sight,
As o'er all there settles the darkness of night,
Draped in our own colors, red, white and blue
A brilliantly-lighted hall then comes to view.

Musical instruments also are seen,
And people expectant, as if for a Queen;
No, it is not for a Queen that they wait,
Victoria, of England, is there in her state.

Suddenly silence succeeds to the hum,
O'er faces impatient contentment has come;
Now there appears, in the midst of the hush,
A face that is radiant with victory's flush.

Taking a seat at an instrument near,
She draws from it tones quick, prolonged,
sweet and clear;

Reaching the end of the theme there's a pause—
She rises mid round upon round of applause.
Cora, thy features I plainly discern,
The wheel of "good fortune" has done thee turn.

FLORA J. NORTHRROP.
The lights have all begun to fade away;
Our colors, too, have vanished from my sight.
The shadows of the slow, departing day
Are heralding their brothers of the night.

A quaint, brown village church is what I see;
Majestic trees on every side around,
Where birds of heaven warble cheerily,
Filling the air with sweet, discordant sound.

And in the distance many forms are seen,
Which grow distinct as they approach more near;
It is a bridal company, I guess,
For one does like a bride appear

Her eyes and hair are of the deepest night;
Her face and figure,—yes, I know them well!
And they are thine, if I can trust my sight,
Dear Flora, in all things the truth to tell.

A sunny smile is lighting up thy face,
The mirror of a heart's full happiness,
Of frowns and tears I see no sign or trace,
But all is love, and pride, and joyfulness.

Now, quick the bright procession moves along,
And enters at the door thrown open wide.
Through which I see a gay, admiring throng,
Where stands the groom in waiting for his bride.

The door has closed and I am left without.
The shades of eve have fallen over all.
The birds have ceased their flying in and out
Their songs are hushed by night's descending pall.

JANE T. VOSBURGH.
Suddenly over all flashes the day,
Flowers bloom, birds sing, little ones play.

Off in the meadow with daisies o'er grown,
Wanders a maiden, musing alone.

Slender and graceful, comely and fair,
Curle has she, too, of rich nut-brown hair.

Children blithe suddenly gather around,
White clover blossoms pluck from the ground.
Pausing, she greets each child happy and gay,
Then, with a glad zest, joins in their play.

"Have I not seen this bright maiden before?"
"Yes," says the King, "look closely once more,
Surely you know your class infant, my child?"
"Know her? Of course! has reason gone wild!

Not to know Jane, dear Jane, pride of our class!
Youngest and gayest, worst, too, alas!"

Weaving a chain of clover-buds white,
Crown thy dear teacher, loving and bright.

On her head, gently, Old Time lays his palm,
"Good Luck," our watchword, will guard her from harm.

Now the sibyl adds her blessings to the joys
That are in store,
Calling down upon your young heads happiness
Forever more.
May your lives be ever useful, glowing with
In deeds of love,
Till the work on earth is ended, and the crown
Is gained above.

Written by the Other Four.

CARRIE MEILY.
But what of our Carrie, so blithesome and gay,
Our poet, our torment, our life and our light;
With moods like the change of a bright April day?
Her fate, O ye muses, assist us to write.

Ah, she who is wildest and merriest of all,
Will alter her manners in taste and in looks,
Will grow to a woman so stately and tall,
A lover of travel, a writer of books.

And music no longer her heart will enthral,
'Tis lost with the other sweet pleasures of youth;

Her only delight is the works of great men,
Her life is all spent in a search for the truth.

Her fame o'er land and o'er sea will extend,
And all will acknowledge her talents are high,
Although to the world our most brilliant we yield,

We lose the most loved of our band with a sigh.

What Russia Wants.

The New York Tribune says: "Gen. Low Wallace, who was seen yesterday, and who has been in a position to learn thoroughly what the Turks think of the Russian advance in Afghanistan, declares that at Constantinople the Czar is believed to want to get an outlet in the Persian Gulf more than he wants anything else just now. A line of trade down the Persian Gulf, connecting at the head of that body of water with the Russian railway, now constructing in Asia, could keep up a brisk competition with the Suez Canal."

The Albany, N. Y., Express don't seem to regard Mr. Blaine as the Moses who is to lead the Republican party out of the Wilderness in 1888. It does not say so in just so many words, but we get a vague idea of its feelings and opinions from these expressions: "We don't want to enter upon the next Presidential race handicapped with a beaten horse. We don't want to fight another campaign as we did the last, on the defensive. We don't want a man who has been a standing candidate for President since 1876, rejected by two National Conventions and endorsed by one, only to lead the Republican party to defeat for the first time in a quarter of a century."

Stocks are down again. Norcross is below 8, Savage is about 3, and the others are all off in proportion.

The salary of the Austin Postmaster has been reduced to $1,200 per annum. The Reno office is the same as last year, $1,800.

The 4th of July decorations are being taken down, and those in good condition are being put away until the next time.

Pete Comstock arrived from Sacramento yesterday, and thinks he can certainly do as well in the old camping grounds as anywhere he has been.

The street-sprinkling cart has quit work, and well might Dunning save wear and tear of himself and team, for his total collections only amounted to $15 a week. The streets must be sprinkled, and the business men must make up their minds to pay enough to give man and beast at least two meals a day.

Departed For New Fields.

The following from the Elko Independent is concerning Mrs. Henry Welsh, formerly of Reno. Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Welsh came down by stage from Tuscarora yesterday and left by train this morning. Mr. Welsh accompanies his wife as far as Winnemucca, where he takes the stage for Silver City, Idaho. Mrs. Welsh goes to Modesto, California, on a visit to her father, General Kittrell. The lady has taught the primary department of the Tuscarora schools for the past six months, in which position we are pleased to state, she has given such satisfaction that the trustees tendered her a large increase of salary to remain during the next year, but as Mr. Welsh has secured a desirable position at Silver City, she deemed it best to decline the position and make the visit previous to joining her husband in Idaho, where they propose to locate permanently. We wish them abundant success in their new field of labor.

Plans Accepted.

The Board of Regents of the State University have adopted the plans prepared by Curtis, the architect. Proposals for buildings are now in order.

Blaine Will Control the Nominations.

The Sun's special from Portland, Me., has this: The Express this afternoon says: It is understood that James Weeks, treasurer of the Republican National Committee, while at Old Orchard last week said: Blaine will never again be the Republican candidate for President, but will control its nominations and in the face of Blaine's opposition Logan will not secure the nomination in 1888. Weeks would not object to see General Logan as a candidate, but cannot see that he could succeed under the circumstances.

REDUCTION WORKS

Why They Should be Located at Dayton.

The Lyon county Times says: Some four or five years ago, when Fred Birdsall was the owner of what is now the Douglas mill, there was at one time considerable talk about erecting a smelter and reduction works to be run in connection with the mill. The project was so seriously thought of that J. E. Gignoux, who was then assayer for Birdsall, was sent to Eureka and other places where there were works for reducing refractory ores, to see which would be the best process to adopt. For some reason the scheme fell through and since then there has been no talk of reduction works in this country until recently. It is understood that Reno is to have reduction works any way, and that Messrs Bliss, Mills and Mackay are the gentlemen who are to furnish the capital for their erection. It also seems that Mr. Stevens is contemplating the construction of works and that he is undecided whether to locate them at Carson or Reno. It is estimated that 125 tons of rock per day can be had from mines all along the line of the C. P., with which to keep the smelter running. Now if there are to be two institutions of this kind put up, one of them should be on the line of the C. & C., for there will be as much if not more ore come from mines along its route than will come to Reno over the C. P. The Reno JOURNAL, in estimating the cost of running the business, says that coal can be furnished for 20 cents per bushel; labor (ordinary), $2 per day; smelters, $3.50 per day; mechanical engineers, $5 per day; ordinary engineers, to run engines, $4 50 per day; blacksmiths, $4 per day, and carpenters $6. There is no reason why Dayton cannot make just as good a bid as the above. The wood, coal and water facilities are equal to those of Reno, and labor can be had, and lots of it, at the above figures, which are much lower than any other point along the C. & C. can offer, and there is not another point that has the wood and water advantages of this place. Ores from all parts of the Southern country can be shipped to this point at a less cost than to Reno, as there will be no transfer from the C. & C. to the V. & T. Again, if works are put up at any point farther South than Dayton, it will cost considerable more to run them, and the bullion would have to be shipped to Carson or San Francisco any way. It would not cost very much more to carry rock from Independence to Dayton than it would to only carry it to Hawthorne, and when converted into bullion here it would be but a short way to ship it to either one of the Mills. There is another point. There is base ore in Como, which, as yet, there has been found no way of working. There is a prospect that the camp will before long amount to something, and if it does, the ore will probably be worked here, as it would be cheaper to run it down to works on the river than to build works up there where there is a scarcity of wood and water. If Mr. Stevens is going to put up reduction works, let him look outside of Reno and Carson, and he may find a better location for his enterprise.

Democrats Displeased With a Recent Appointment.

Samuel J. Tilden and his friends are very indignant over the appointment of ex-Governor Noyes to be a Government Director of the Union Pacific Railroad, on account of his connection with the electoral count in Florida during the Hayes-Tilden contest of 1876. This feeling is not confined to Tilden and his friends, but is very generally shared by Democrats whose attention has been directed to the matter. The report of the Potter investigating committee has been resurrected and that portion of the report and the testimony which relates to General Noyes' participation in the canvass of the electoral vote of Florida while serving as a visiting statesman has been laid before the President. Some of the more prominent Democrats confidently assert that the appointment of General Noyes will be revoked.

A Gentle Hint from Cleveland.

The Herald's Washington special says the President has indicated that there will be but a few appointments made for the far West for three weeks at least. This is understood to be a gentle hint that some of the Oregon; Nevada and California applicants for office who have been in Washington since last March can take a short trip home if they desire to do so and not lose any point. Acting on this advice several Pacific Coast men will start for their homes, among them Representative Henley.

CLEVELAND'S APPOINTMENTS.

A Republican Senator Thinks That Most of Them Will Be Confirmed.

The Times Detroit correspondent has interviewed Conger, who said, relating to the President's appointments and the Senate's power of confirmation: "It may be as well be understood that we have conferred with each other, exchanged views, and to a certain extent, formulated plans for next winter. When the nominations come in you may put it down as pretty certain that the Republican Senators will concede to the President the absolute right to name men of his own choosing for any of two kinds of positions: First those whose terms of office have expired. In regard to them there will be no controversy whatever. Second, those positions which are in any way connected with the policy of the administration. This is precisely the same reason that the President does have the privilege of naming his own Cabinet. There is hardly a case on record where the Senate has in any way interfered with such appointments. Any others that are in way identified with the policy of the administration will be conceded to the President without question." Conger continued that the civil service reform would be looked into seriously, as well as the offensive partisan question, and where unqualified officers were appointed for a term of years there might be considerable trouble.

Preserving Valuable Documents.

In consequence of age and constant handling some of the earlier extensive documents are in a very dilapidated condition. To preserve these as long as possible the Secretary of the Senate has had them carefully straightened out and fitted to parchment backs and bound in durable form. Included in these documents are three messages from President Washington; also a message from President Adams of May 17, 1790, nominating his own son, John Quincy Adams, to be Minister to Russia; and also his message of July 20, 1798, nominating Washington to be Lieutenant-General and Commander-in-Chief of the armies of the United States. It was at this time that our infant republic was threatened with serious European complications, and Washington had consented to come from his retirement at Mount Vernon and respond to the call of his country. A document of very rare character is a confidential communication sent to the Senate by the House of Representatives in 1803, through two of its members, especially appointed for that purpose—Mr. Nicholson and Mr. Bayard—and which contained a copy of a bill passed by the House with closed doors, providing for the conduct of negotiations with France and Spain looking to the purchase of the "Island of New Orleans" and the provinces of East and West Florida.

Policy of the Commissioner of Pensions.

When Miss Ada Sweet, the Pension Agent at Chicago, was asked by General Black to resign, she was given until June 30th to send in her resignation. Inquiry at the White House has developed the fact that her case has not been under consideration, and it could not be said what would be done in the matter. A circumstance occurred to-day in connection with the Pension Agency at Pittsburg which is supposed to outline General Black's policy in regard to the Chicago office, if he succeeds in removing Miss Sweet. Congressman Boyle has a brother who is desirous of succeeding the present agent at Pittsburg. When Mr. Boyle to-day pressed the Commissioner for a decision, the latter replied: "I can't tell you whom I shall appoint, but I can assure you that your brother will not be the man, for the reason that he was not a soldier. I am determined that none but veterans shall be rewarded with these places."

The New York City Directory shows the population of the city to be about 1,553,730. Allowing one name in the Directory to represent five persons, it increases the rate 97,000 yearly. It contains the names and addresses of 310,746 citizens—an increase of 10,717 over last year's Directory.

Remarks and Conditions.

Nominations to stakes must be made to the Secretary on or before the first day of August, 1885. Entries for the purses must be made on Monday's races on the Saturday preceding; for Wednesday's races, on Monday, and for Friday's races on Wednesday, at the regular time for closing entries as designated by the rules. Those who have nominated in stakes must name to the Secretary in writing, which they will start, the day before the race, at 6 p. m. Horses entered in purses can only be drawn by the consent of the Judges. The rules of the Pacific Coast Horse Association will govern running races.

All horses entered for State purses must be owned and kept in Nevada and California east of the Sierra Nevada, for six months prior to day of race.

Entries to all trotting races will close Sept. 1st, with the Secretary.

Five or more to enter, and three or more to start in all races for purses.

National Trotting Association rules to govern trotting races. Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association rules to govern running races, except as above.

Each day's races will commence promptly at 10 o'clock P. M.
